

International students: France welcomes you

Despite the coronavirus pandemic, France has done everything to let you join your institution safely at the start of the academic year, whatever your country of origin. Whether you are a student in long-term or short-term studies, a student in an internship or a researcher, you are welcome to France. The consulates can now receive your visa application. For more information, please check with the French consulate or your Campus France office.

How can I come to France?

Depending on your country of origin,
the steps to follow are different.

Use this document to see in which area
your country is included as of August 15.

Please note that areas are frequently updated, and are subject to change depending on the pandemic situation.

If you are coming from a red zone, if possible, get tested before departure. You will protect your health and that of others, and your arrival in France will be easier.

Voluntary 14-day quarantine

If you are coming from a country in the red zone (3rd case) and have not been able to get tested, you must do a voluntary 14-day quarantine upon your arrival, meaning: stay at home as much as possible, avoid contact with others as much as possible, monitor your temperature and immediately report any symptoms to a doctor. It is advised to notify your accommodation in advance so that they can take appropriate measures, if necessary (disinfection, etc.). This voluntary 14-day quarantine aims to protect everyone's health: let's all be careful and responsible.
